"Barefoot College is a non-profit, non-governmental, not-for-profit, community development, educational organization, designed to serve as a catalyst for teaching and to help communities in developing countries develop themselves. Barefoot College and its partners have been working in the Kara Tepe region of Turkey for over five years, with the aim of helping to meet the urgent needs of a community where 90% of the population lives in absolute poverty.LONGMONT, Colo. — Â At least eight people have been killed in the Denver area in the early hours of Monday after a massive thunderstorm roared through the state. Rocky Mountain National Park had several lightning strikes at its entrance, and the National Weather Service reported several lightning strikes in the area as well. It also reported numerous reports of trees being blown down. At least six people were killed in Arapahoe County, which includes the suburb of Aurora, and another was killed in Aurora. There also was at least one fatality in Jefferson County, west of Denver. "The first responders at there are fatalities," Aurora Police Department Chief Daniel D'Arrigo said during a news conference early Monday. "It's not clear at this point what led to the fatalities. D'Arrigo said several people were struck by lightning. The storm was moving southward out of Colorado toward Texas, the weather service reported. Shocking video posted on social media Monday showed the storm racing across the plains from Colorado. "It's pretty impressive," D'Arrigo said of the video. "It's pretty heavy thunder and it's all lightning at the same time. D'Arrigo said it's too early to identify what exactly caused the fatalities. He said investigators will try to figure out the cause and that an autopsy was underway. Officials said a family had been taking a walk near Echo Lake in the park and all seven members were struck by lightning. There were two children and two adults who were killed. Park rangers also said they saw two people in one of the areas where 81e310abff

jPDF Tweak is a Java Swing software application which helps people, as the name hints at, edit PDF documents. This utility does not require installation, meaning it is not going to update with new entries the Windows registry and Start menu/screen. In addition to that, you can copy the program files to any location on the hard drive and click the executable in order to run it from there. It is also possible to use jPDF Tweak on any computer you have access to, by dropping the aforementioned files to a portable storage unit. The interface sports a classical design, reminiscent of the Windows 98 and 95 operating systems. Aside from that, it is built on several tabs, and therefore enabling quick access to all the options available. This software tool lets you upload multiple files at a time, only it does not feature the "drag and drop" function. The latter is considered to be a setback, as it would have helped users manage items even faster. You can crop PDFs to MediaBox, CropBox, BleedBox, ArtBox, rotate both portrait and landscape pages, as well as scale them by choosing a size from a built-in list or by inputting the width and height. Watermarks can be added, either as a customizable transparent text or the first page can be used as a background watermark. It is possible to change chapter bookmarks, by importing them from another PDF or from a CSV file. Attachments and page transitions can be appended, document info can be modified and they can be password-protected using RC4 and AES ciphers, while also choosing permissions (print, edit, copy, fill in, modify annotations etc.). To conclude, although there are some small flaws in jPDF Tweak's interface, it offers a feature-rich environment, good response time and minimal CPU and memory usage. Note: • The software cannot be used to modify or print the last page. This means that if the last page contains a variable PDF, jPDF Tweak can only add to it or remove items from the previous pages. • It is possible to perform some operations that are usually not possible, such as add a password and delete pages. This is due to the compatibility with other software. • The file size cannot exceed 9.7 GB. • It is not possible to open files from a network share or from an external drive. • It is not possible to print every page with all the annotations applied. • Some functions might not work as expected due to the application being built for a Microsoft Windows platform. jPDF Tweak is a Java Swing software application which helps people, as the name hints at, edit PDF documents. This utility does not require installation, meaning it is not going to update with new entries the Windows registry and Start menu/screen. In addition to that, you can copy the
